As Judge Carew had ordered, 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt was taken to church last Sunday. In St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Garden City, L. I., she revealed by her misdeeds that she was not familiar with the ritual of the mass. Above she is shown emerging after services, during which she made a $10 donation, followed by her aunt-custodian, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and accompanied by a private detective.

ROOT CROPS MUST BE ATTRACTIVE TO NET MOST PROFIT

Urbana, Ill.—Through experience gained in marketing more than $100,000 worth of beets and carrots annually, Illinois vegetable growers have discovered that to net the maximum profits their root crops must be clean, neatly packed and pleasing to the eye of prospective buyers, says J. W. Lloyd, chief in fruit and vegetable marketing at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

As they come from storage pits, turnips, parsnips, salsify, beets and carrots are usually dirty and unattractive, requiring special preparation to put them in a salable condition, points out Lloyd. This is accomplished by the use of tubs or tanks of water and brushes, or by means of a special root washer. The top of the crown and tip of the root of each specimen are then cut off to give the vegetable a fresher appearance.

With the exception of salsify, these root crops are usually packed in shallow boxes or in bushel baskets for selling at grocery stores or other retail establishments. The roots may be placed indiscriminately in the package until it is nearly full. Then, in the case of carrots and parsnips the roots making up the top layer are arranged in a circle or circles with the tops pointing toward the outside rim of the basket and the tails toward the center. Beets and turnips are arranged in a somewhat similar manner, but can not be placed so attractively owing to the shape of the roots.

Preparing salsify for market differs considerably from the method used for other root crops. There are usually a number of side roots on each specimen and these, as well as the top of the crown, should be carefully trimmed off. The salsify roots are then tied in bunches, usually six to a bunch, by means of soft, stout twine. Two tyings are made, one just below the crown and the other about five inches lower down, pulling the cords tightly to hold the bunch securely in shape. Finally the tips of the roots are cut off so that the bunch will be even across the bottom. In most markets it is useless to attempt to sell salsify unless it is prepared in this way, it is said.

Tax Collections in County for 1933 Up to Very High Level

About Ninety-five Per Cent of Taxes Extended Have Been Collected

Don't let anyone tell you that the people of Morgan county are not good citizens, that they do not take their citizenship seriously and meet obligations as best they can. They have just created another record for all law-abiding, conscientious communities to shoot at. The tax records at the office of Ex-Officio Tax Collector Blackburn show that the average citizen pays his taxes, even though the pinch of depression may be felt.

The collection of 1933 taxes payable in 1934 has just been completed. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were poured into the public treasury, to be apportioned among the various departments to operate the county government for another year. More than 92 per cent of taxes extended have been collected, and when certain litigation is ironed out the total collections will rise to about 95 per cent.

This example of good citizenship may be lacking in some counties, particularly in those where large cities are located, but the average Morgan county property owner steps up and pays his tax bill. He has nothing to be ashamed of when he helps to create such a record.

The total amount of taxes extended for 1933 was $746,174.08, and of this a net revenue of $692,433.42 has been collected.

Tax figures that have been compiled by L. Arch Vasconcellos, chief deputy, and other employees of the sheriff's office show that $20,164.23 was forfeited to the State. Matters in the process of litigation including objections of railroads and colleges represented $18,555.40. The discount on five per cent per annum amounted to $1,117.25, and the clerk's extension fees and collectors' commission was $16,581.86.

A total of 92,798 per cent collection is shown for the year, 2,485 being in litigation, making a total of 95,284 taxes collected for 1933.

Taxes collected are distributed as follows:
State, 35; County, 9.34; Highway, 1.94; Tuberculosis Sanitarium, 3.06; County Bonds, 1.65; Cities and Villages, 19.79; Schools, 48.21; Roads, 12.03; Dog Tax, 10.

Churches to Join in Health Crusade

Tuberculosis Campaign to Be Mentioned in Many Churches Dec. 2

"Tuberculosis Sunday" will be observed by churches of all denominations in Illinois and throughout the United States on December 2. It was announced today by W. P. Shahan, executive secretary of the Illinois Tuberculosis Association.

Pastors will unite in calling attention of their congregations to the organized fight against tuberculosis. In some denominations, short announcements will be read from the pulpit; other pastors will select as their text, "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." Matthew, 10:31; others have informed the association that they have prepared health sermons, assisted by local physicians.

"It is particularly fitting that the churches co-operate in the campaign against one of man's oldest and worst diseases," Shahan said in discussing the project. "As one of the principal agencies for community good, the church of today is concerned with the physical as well as the spiritual welfare of the community. We feel sure that much benefit will accrue from joint participation in Tuberculosis Sunday, December 2."

Although no attempt will be made to raise funds from church congregations on that day, members will be reminded of the Christmas Seal Sale which opens November 30.

Will Talk on Why and What to Read

Two Lectures at Illinois College Next Week by Mrs. MacClintock

Announcement that Mrs. W. D. MacClintock will lecture at Illinois college will be of great interest to many friends and admirers of Mrs. MacClintock in Jacksonville. She will give two lectures under auspices of the English department.

The subject of the first lecture will be "Why Read?" and will be delivered in Jones Chapel, Tuesday evening, December 4, at 7:30. Because of this lecture, the date of the George Gridley Wood freshman debate has been changed from Tuesday to Thursday evening, December 6.

The other lecture, which is to be given at the general assembly hour, Thursday morning, December 6, will be entitled, "How to Read."

There will be no admission charge for either lecture. Students and faculty are asked to assemble early, since the doors will be thrown open to the public ten minutes before the lecture, due to the speaker's popularity as a lecturer in the city.

Mrs. MacClintock is a former resident of Jacksonville, the wife of Prof. W. D. MacClintock, formerly of the Illinois college faculty, and as a teacher, lecturer, as well as author she has achieved noted success.

Dr. G. P. Crowden, London physician, has developed a building material for partitions and walls, made of sheets of asbestos covered on each side by aluminum foil. The material is so resistant to changes in temperature that an electric light in a room insulated with the material will keep the room warm, though the temperature is around the freezing point outdoors.

Carrollton

Carrollton, Ill., Nov. 27.—The old original hook and ladder wagon, which was bought by the Carrollton city council in May, 1878, and kept in the fire department quarters since, was presented to the local post of the American Legion by the city officers. The Legion members are having it painted and intend making it the official vehicle of the post, in district and state parades. It is intended to have it appear in the line in the national parade of the Legion next fall. "Carrollton Hook and Ladder Company No. 1" which was formed in July, 1878, the members of which manned the truck appears to have been Carrollton's first organized fire company. The wagon is in very good condition today after fifty-six years in which the Carrollton fire company has had it. It had not been used since this city motorized its equipment.

TERRACES ARE KEY TO SAVING OF SOIL ON SLOPING LANDS

Urbana, Ill.—Whatever attempts are made to conserve soil resources on some 12 million acres of rolling land used for the production of cultivated crops in Illinois will fail unless terracing is made the first step, according to Ralph C. Hay, agricultural engineer at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

This fact, which figures in the present wave of sentiment for soil conservation, has nowhere been demonstrated more strikingly than on the farm of Theodore Reuss, Belleville, St. Clair county, Hay said.

Terraces carefully laid out and properly built are always good insurance for the successful start of a line and legume program on sloping, erosive land, it was pointed out. They remove the danger of having expensive limestone, fertilizer and seed washed away by the fall and spring rains before crops can get started. If a terraced field is immediately planted to legumes, the terraces become well settled and established so that they will hold the soil from serious erosion when corn and small grains are later planted.

Nine years ago Reuss had a badly eroded field in a low state of fertility as a result of sheet erosion. It was so cut up by several gullies that crossing the land with farm machinery was difficult. Manure, lime and legume seeds washed down the slopes when attempts were made to build up the productivity of the soil.

Acting upon the suggestion of the U. of I. extension agricultural engineer, Reuss built five terraces across this field in 1925 to prevent soil washing, seeded it to alfalfa and secured a good stand. When this land was later planted to wheat, the yield from the field was twice what it had been before terracing.

In the beginning, this St. Clair county farmer had some trouble with his terraces, but he now considers them well worth all the effort required in construction and maintenance. At the gullies the terraces broke through several times and had to be rebuilt with a slip scraper. Today the gullies are filled so that the entire field may be farmed as one unit. There was also serious washing in the outlet ditch, but properly built brush dams soon controlled this trouble. By cultivating this field on the contour and by back-furrowing to the ridges each time he plows, Reuss now has no difficulty in maintaining the terraces in good condition.
